The Global Leadership Summit is not just an event to attend; it's a resource to be leveraged. And through The Global Leadership Network, you are going to see the resources of GLS organized around leading yourself, leading others and leading organizations.

FIRST STEP

Top 10

Our challenge to you is to First capture your Top 10 Actionable Ideas. It can be tempting to leave inspired, but lack movement forward. We ask that you create a Top 10 actionable idea list from the things you hear from the Summit faculty and specifically note which actionable items apply to leading yourself, leading others or leading organizations.

SECOND STEP

Debriefs

Second, we want to challenge you over the next 7 days to debrief your top 10 with your staff, coworkers or trusted friends. Let them help you process what implementing these ideas looks like. Share what speakers and ideas influenced you and if you came with your team, let them share what they took away. The potential for leadership conversations could have significant impact in organizations all over our city.

THIRD STEP

Growth Tracks

Third, over the next 30 days consider signing up for year round resources including a Growth Track. Through the GLSNext mobile app, there is a series of topical tracks with content from this year and previous years of Summits including strategic delivery via email to keep you and your team in learning mode year round. You can go online to GlobalLeadership.org and select resources to help you build your leadership capacity.

FOURTH STEP

Leadership Learning Communities

And Fourth, but very important, over the next 60 days we want to invite you to build your own Leadership Learning Community. Or in other words, take the actionable ideas from your GLS experience combined with ongoing content from The Global Leadership Network and use it to connect with other leaders who want to progress on their Leadership development journey. It might be as simple as a breakfast group reading a speaker's book together or adding a GLSNext video clip to your staff meetings or it might be a group of Pastors, CEO's or other local leaders that gather quarterly around GLS topics.

What does Leadership Development look like for you? What's next in leading yourself, leading others and leading organizations? It's time for us to take responsibility for our growth as leaders. It's time for a Grander Vision.
